'Sky art' to be RRF feature

By BILL SHERROD

Appomattox Countians will be witnessing a unique sky entertainment at this year's Railroad Festival, as fireworks display.

Pyrotechnic Display," might be an inappropriate term. There are those who will approach their business as much as an art as a form of sky art.

"According to Blot, they sky is the canvas, and the fireworks, well. They have done fireworks displays in the past, and the physical characteristics of the sky dictate the scene he wishes to create.

Paul Busbey, one of the three members of the Railroad Festival Committee, said that Europeans fireworks displays are much more elaborate than American fireworks displays. "But, the viewer is not disappointed. American fireworks display, there is never a minute when there is not something to see."

Pyrotechnic Display, Inc., does smaller shows as well. They have done fireworks displays for weddings and graduations to name a few. Pyrotechnic Display, Inc. does not do any of the football practice field displays, unlike in an American fireworks show," Busbey says.

The show will get underway at the field to get a good look at the sky," according to Busbey.

Pyrotechnic Display, Inc. is a subsidiary of Pyrotechnic Industries, Inc., which is headquartered in Bonsall, California. Pyrotechnic Industries, Inc. is the largest manufacturer of fireworks in the United States.

Drought no threat now, but more rain needed soon

By FRANCES B. PAULETTE

Appomattox County citizens a standpoint of health, the county are not as drastic as it might seem, according to sources water supply in the county.

"While there are a few citizens who are having water problems, it is not widespread. A few individuals with shallow wells have had to have the wells bored deeper since the July 4th rain. If we get a good rain within the next two weeks, we could have a good year."

The dark tobacco crops in Appomattox County are in good shape, according to Sweet, maybe the best in years.

Clarence Sizer, assistant to the director of the Virginia Department, says from a temperatures may be having a problem with water, but

"It's going to take additional water to make a good crop," said Sizer. "If it doesn't rain, we will have a good crop, some rain will be needed, but not as much as Nash. "I foresee no water shortage now. We just used in the new well recently and it is pushing approximately 150 gallons per minute. This additional water, above what

Louise Martin gets welfare board nod

Mrs. E. Carter (Louise) Martin was sworn in as a member of the Appomattox County Welfare Board at the regular meeting of the Appomattox County Board, and is the first woman ever to be appointed to a seat on the Welfare Board.

Martin succeeds Mrs. Carter Martin, a farmer in the Appomattox County. They are not related as well.

She presently serves as a secretary of the local chapter and is the local treasurer as well.

Mrs. Martin was sworn in by Circuit Court Judge Ronald J. Forrester (Ray Lee) Mrs. Martin's husband is employed by the Virginia Department of Transportation.

A retired teacher, she was for 30 years in Appomattox County Schools.

She is a member of the local Longwood College Alumni Association, and national Retired Teachers Association, is secretary of the Appomattox County Democratic Committee of the Appomattox Democratic Committee.

She is a member of the United Methodist Women, and serves as church secretary of the Methodist Church Administrative Board.

During that time, she coached girls' sports for 17 years.

After being sworn in Mrs. Martin said that she is honored to have been chosen to serve Appomattox County on the Welfare Board, and noted that she will do her best to carry out her duties as a member of that board.

Locals take conservative approach

By BILL SHERROD

Administrators in Virginia's welfare programs are taking a conservative approach to the governor's emphasis on spending cuts and a tightened budget.

That's the word from Virginia Babcock, director of Social Services for the Appomattox County Welfare Board, and local members of the Board of directors in the Fifth Congressional District.

Babcock and the directors met in Farmville recently to discuss proposed regulations regarding welfare programs and the need to be prepared.

"We'd like to see certain programs protected, so that the people who really need them get them," Babcock says.

Administrators in the governor's cuts and a tightened budget.

The directors, along with Babcock, are from localities in the Fifth Congressional District.

Babcock says that Secretary of Human Resources Jane Woods Harris has proposed that the Fifth Congressional District's welfare programs be exempted from the federally proposed cuts for the Social Services cuts

Another of the issues discussed at the meeting was the federal regulations which create a sense of confusion and make it virtually impossible for a client to

According to Babcock, the Fifth District directors agree that no other single region has been more conservative in its approach to welfare programs.

"We're scheduling meetings with the Local Assistance Program, which is chaired by the Governor and the Lieutenant Governor, and Secretary Harris, to discuss proposed changes in the Children Program a temporary assistance program.

Babcock says that Secretary Schweiker was receptive to and included emphasizing the individual's responsibility, strengthening program eligibility to those persons most in need, and the Fifth Congressional District's leadership development classes

Appomattox seems to be doing just fine this summer if there are occasional showers and there are ways to cool off. There are swimming pools, projects and activities. Frequently I see buses loading up with campers headed for Holiday Lake or to Smith Mountain Lake. And there are the swimming pools every day or night, several diamonds being available. A drobe through town and county. Cars with out-of-state tags are frequently observed at our shopping centers, laundromats and restaurants. Last week in Appomattox, one in Thomasville, one in Alabama, one in Mississippi, three in Texas, one in Florida, one in South Carolina, one in Alabama, one in Tennessee, three in Texas, one in Florida, one in South Carolina
